Martine Jacobs – Personal Pastels

These pastel works are very personal, and perhaps controversial. Martine was reflecting deeply on the absence of compassion and love among human beings. She questioned: "Was God there?"

These are painful works, created from a place of doubt, grief, and confrontation. Martine herself expressed hesitation about making them public, unsure if the world was ready to face their intensity.